We shame the language of our sires— We talk so mild and meekly; We've "operative" for working men, And draw our "salaries" weekly. Our "lady" takes the place of "wife"— That word so true and hearty; And every "man's" a "centleman." And every "man's" a "gentleman," Unless we call him "party." The "shopman" hates the name of shop; And, by perversion later, The man who digs a railway french, Is called a " navigator."

Oh, give us back our honest speech!

It had a soul of beauty;

And let us do our daily "work,"

And think it pleasant duty; Let's earn our " veges" as of yore-The word can mayer harm us; Let's love our "sweethearts" and our "wives, And own that "women" charm us, So shall our actions, like our words, Be void of affection,

And "spade" be "spade" and "man" be "man. Throughout the Yankee nation. Pat Doolan, at Gettysburg, bow ed his head to a cannon ball, which went whizzing past six inches above his bare skin. "Faith," said Pat, "one never loses anything by politeness.'

A CONTENTED MAN .- A druggist was aroused by the ringing of his night bell, went down stairs, and had to serve a customer with a dose of salts. On his return his wife grumbled out, "What profit did you get on the penny?" ha' penny," replied the assidnous drug-gist. "And for that ha' penny you will keep both me and yourself awake for a long time," rejoined the wife. "Never mind," added the placed druggist, "the dose of salts will keep him awake much longer; let us thank Heaven that we have the profits and not the pain of the transaction."

REAL GENTLEMEN. - "Well, Mr. Flunkey," said a lawyer to a waiter who was under examination, "you say the defendant is no gentleman. What makes you think so?" "Cause, sir, he always says, 'Thank you,' when I hand him a mutton, or even a piece of bread. Now a real gentleman never does this, but hollers out, 'Here, Bill, get mea mutton chop, or I'll throw this pepper box at your head.' You can't deceive me with a gentleman, your worship. 'Cause why? I have associated with too many at the race course."

In Artemus Ward's inimitable lecture on ghosts, which by the way was COMMISSION BUSINESS, a ghost of a lecture so far as ghosts were concerned, he tells of an absurd man | And hope that I will find a continuance of the who wouldn't have any glass in his windows—he thought the sash would be enough, as it would keep out the coarsest on produce in store. My motto is, of the cold. This reminds a correspondent of a story that old Parson H-, of Quick Sales and Prompt Returns. P-, used to tell of his experience of the cold on the night of his marriage. They went on a "bridle tower" to his cousin's, down on the shore of Connecticut, and spent the night, which was one of the coldest of the season, and being put into a cold spare room, they suffered severely. After a while his wife asked him to get up and see if he couldn't find something more to put upon the bed. After a diligent search he could find nothing but his and his wife's clothing, which he gathered up and packed upon the bed, and got in and tried it again, but still they "grew no warmer very fast," and his wife begged of him to get up and search about and see if anything more could be found, and suggested that there might possibly be something in a closet in one corner of the room; so he Peas, Dried Fruits, Flour went and examined the closet, and reported to his wife that an old fish net was the only thing he could find. "Well, my dear," said she, "put it on, put it on, that will tangle the cold a little." - Bos-

GEN. GRANGER AND A NEGRO SENTINEL -There is a negro recruiting office on Cedar street, Nashville, at the door of which stands a negro sentinel with his musket. A number of persons standing around, on the 2nd inst, took a considerable interest in noting the conduct of white officers who passed by. The sentinel saluted every officer that came along, and received the usual recognition. At last Gen. Granger was espied riding up the street, accompanied by a lady, and he immediately became the focus of all the eyes. What would he do? Would he return the salutation of the sentinel of African lineage? He did. Returning shortly after, by himself, the sentinel saluted him the second time. The General paused, put him through a short lesson in the manuel of arms, and when he brought him to a "present arms," saluted him, and departed. We hope this example of the worthy General will not be lost on the lesser lights, who appear to be afraid that the regro will get upon an equality with them, or they with the negro, we don't exactly know which, and who are shocked with the impropriety of putting arms into the hands of men of color. - Nashville Union.

Young NIMROD'S FIRST AND LAST SHOT. -A couple of gentlemen went out shooting the other day. One of them had never indulged in the sport before, and he consequently experienced that excitement peculiar to a young hunter going after his first game. The other being "an old hand at the gun, "was cool and collected. The young hunter begged the privilege of shooting the first game that turned up, which was granted. "Look," spake the elder Nimrod, there goes a squirrel." Where?" exclaimed Nimrod the younger, trembling with sudden excite-

"There-up that tree-down againalong the fence-see, into that heap of brush. I'll start him out, and you shoot Cautiously did old Nimrod move around to the other side of the brush in order to head off the squirrel, telling the adolescent Nim. to watch closely and shoot the game as it appeared, inserting a pole into the brush, meanwhile to start the squirrel out. Trembling and flushed with the unusual excitement, young Nimrod hardly knew whether he was on his head or heels He attempted to cock his gun by tugging insanely at the trigger, and then struggled to put

We have had several threats from the clouds, but like rebel's threats to carry the war north of the Ohio, they have turned out threats alone. Yesterday the clouds gathered thicker than usual, and far more sable, frowning like a "darkhaired and dark-eyed man of destiny," we know of, but whether or not they will pour out any libations to the river god's or river men, remains to be seen, and our readers will probably find out as soon as we, if they say awake as long.

There was a perfect cessation in business on the levee yesterday, there being North First St., Evansville; no boats in port except; the high-headed and active little Chambers. The Colossus arrived from Louisvilla during Wednesday night, and returned
